PUBLIC HEARING

Critical Areas Ordinance

Jared Bond, Environmental Engineer Technician and Bill Franz, Director of Public Works gave an initial presentation on the Critical Areas Ordinance. This will include the Wetlands, Streams, Steep Slopes and Fish and Wildlife priority areas.

John Mauro, Smart Growth Director, spoke on behalf of the Pilchuck Audubon Society. The Pilchuck Audubon Society has been looking at all jurisdictions in Snohomish County concerning the Critical Areas Ordinance. Their concerns are a strong set of protections, such as the "quality of life issues". He outlined all this in a letter he wrote to the Public Works Department, which was forwarded to the Planning Commission.

Mr. Mauro submitted a CD with vast information on the "Best Available Science" study, which he and other of his colleagues have prepared.

Commissioner Bigler's question is it the intent to Categorize the entire length of those streams that are in Lynnwood as Category 1?

Mr. Bond said that according to the BAS (Best Available Science) document, the system they use is based on the DNR (Department of Natural Resources) system and it's consistent with Washington DNR and other widely used systems based on what they discriminate against.

Commissioner Peycheff commented that she needed clarification at the next meeting as to the letter from Mr. Mauro and Jones & Stokes's recommendation that there are two areas where they seem to disagree with staff's recommendation. One is on the buffer averaging and the other is the reduction being allowed because of surrounding uses.

The Planning Commission needs additional time to go over the letter Mr. Mauro submitted and Public Hearing will be brought back on February 24, 2005.

WORK SESSIONS

Senior Planner Dennis Lewis and Assistant Planner Gina Coccia gave an initial review on the Lynnwood's Zoning Code for compliance with SB-6593.
